A Christmas Message From The Base Commander

Christmas is a time for family, and this year, as ever, the Comox family finds itself spread around the world. "While Shepherds watch their flocks by night," as the Christmas Carol goes, "shepherds" from CFB Comox, some home from the Gulf War, have watched or are watching out for us and our flocks by standing duty on Base, at Holberg and Goose Spit and in places as far away as the Arctic, the Middle East and a host of detachments and deployments at places in between. Their prayers for peace, like ours, have a special poignancy at this time of year.

At Christmas-time the Christian community pauses to reflect on the quest for Peace on Earth and Goodwill to Mankind. This year we should be thankful that our prayers were answered last year: there was a swift conclusion to the war in the Persian Gulf and the Soviet Union is no longer an adversary. Democracy is at work in the formerly Russian dominated states and there is some evidence and abundant hope that a new world order will see fewer nuclear missiles, combatants and armed forces. While we rejoice in that new hope, we must not drop our guard for the forces of evil have not been stamped out.

True, Saddam Hussein is no longer an international threat but his brutality is felt daily by targeted minorities within Iraq's borders. The Soviet Union which threatened the existence of Peace and Goodwill by ideology, power politics and extraordinary force no longer exists, but the very powerful Soviet military machine does. Verbal assurances, that the nations which have emerged to take the place of much of what was the USSR have the nuclear response under control, lack the credibility, stability and reliability of the deterrence we have been accustomed to. Nor does the new federation of states include all of the holders of intercontinental missiles let alone the tactical or battlefield nuclear weapons. And where are the scientists who built the missiles? Who will they work for in the future? Are they being recruited by nations seeking to become nuclear powers? What is the command and control structure over the armed forces and how responsible and effective is it? It will take some time to answer these questions and many more like them, but the ability to question rekindles the spirit of freedom from the oppression of the communist yoke around the world.

The Totem Times staff wish all of our readers, contributors, advertisers, our friends in Central Registry and in NPF, Base Photo, and the folks at the Free Press, a Merry Christmas and a New Year of dreams fulfilled.

Thanks
